International Trade Policy and the 2004 Presidential Campaign: What Are the Issues?

Wednesday, September 22, 2004, 4:00–5:30 p.m.
Wohlstetter Conference Center, Twelfth Floor, AEI
1150 Seventeenth Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20036

Trade policy has become one of the important issues of the presidential campaign. Topics range from disagreements over outsourcing to calls for mandatory new labor and environmental standards. While President George W. Bush and his advisers proudly advertise their post-2001 accomplishments, Senator John Kerry has called for a moratorium on trade negotiations and a review of U.S. trade policy during the first 120 days of a Kerry presidency. What are the most significant differences between the candidates and parties? On what issues and priorities will there likely be continuity, should Senator Kerry win the election? Two leading representatives of the Bush and Kerry teams will answer these and other questions.
